	The wording regarding MathSciNet and ILL is in the license agreement: “Institutions may use hard copies derived from the electronic edition of the publications for the purpose of inter-library loan with the same limitations that apply to copies for that purpose made from the print edition of the journals. Specifically, copies must be made in compliance with Section 108 of the Copyright Act of the U.S. and be within the CONTU guidelines. Authorized users who do print items must maintain all copyright and other notices on the printed items.”

	The above applies to downloading the review of an article from the database and any other database derived information like citations, search results etc. It does not apply to any original articles linked to from the database. Use of those articles for ILL would be covered under the library's agreement with those individual publishers. Source: Lori Sprague, las@ams.org Additional info: http://www.ams.org/mathscinet/help/about.html
