

Andrea Miller BIO

Associate Professor Andrea Miller has taught in the Manship School of Mass Communication since 2003. She was also the adviser for Tiger Television, LSU's student run TV station, until Fall of 2007. Before receiving her Ph.D. from the Missouri School of Journalism in 2003, Miller worked as a television reporter, anchor, and producer for 10 years at stations across Texas including Dallas-Fort Worth. Research interests include all areas of television news, specifically breaking and crisis coverage, information processing, and visual communication. Mirroring her research interests, Miller also does media consulting specializing in television and crisis situations. In 2003, she won second place in AEJMC's Promising Professor Awards.